About us

The BVCA exists to connect all of the internal components of the private equity and the venture capital industry – investors, fund managers, entrepreneurs and companies, advisers and service providers – to each other and to represent their interests to government, parliamentarians, officials and regulators, the media, other sections of the business community and society at large.

We seek to improve the efficiency of the sector, individually and collectively, by widening access to it and awareness of it, to assist personal and professional development through training programmes and to produce research publications of value recognised both within the industry and beyond it.

We represent over 750 influential firms, including more than 350 General Partners with an accumulated total of over £500bn funds under management. Our members work together to provide capital and expertise to growing businesses, to unlock potential and to deliver enhanced returns to the millions who directly and indirectly invest in our industry.

“We joined BVCA to further expand our network and to participate in the local private equity ecosystem in the UK more actively. As a global organization, we want to contribute to conversations on best practices across geographies given our reach and to collaborate with some of the leading firms and investors who are committed to shining light on the longterm, positive impacts private capital investors can have on our communities – locally and globally.”
